Sad News of Death Of Col. Cornwell Comes By Wireless

The very sad news of the death of Col. W. H. Cornwell at his home in Waikapu this morning came by wireless shortly after the event and being spread about town, acted as a severe shock to the many friends of the deceased in Honolulu. The following special message from the Bulletin's correspondent on Maui, was received at the noon hour:

"Colonel Cornwell died at Waikapu at 8 o'clock this morning after a few hours' illness. Wife and son at the deathbed. Funeral probably tomorrow."

Deceased was the manager of what was the Waikapu Plantation, on the island of Maui, in which he was largely interested. He may correctly be referred to as one of the most popular men in the country, a reputation well deserved. He was unusually well endowed with those many excellent qualities of mind and heart which command the esteem, respect and friendship of all, whether in business or in social affairs. The same remark will apply to W. H. Cornwell's father, who was himself a sugar planter of many years' standing, and highly respected throughout the islands.

The magnificently situated and highly productive Waikapu Plantation was one of the oldest in the Hawaiian group. It was first started in 1861, though the first sugar-cane there grown, was planted by James Louzada

DOLE ASSUMES THE DUTIES OF THE FEDERAL JUDGESHIP

Federal Judge Sanford B. Dole took the oath of office at 10 o'clock this morning in the United States District Court room, in the presence of several hundred persons, members of the bar, jurors, Government officials, Federal officers and private citizens.

Chief Justice Frear administered the oath, all present in the crowded chamber standing, an impressive silence following while the new judge affixed his signature to the document.

Before the hour appointed the court room began to fill and on the stroke of ten every Government department was represented, Circuit Judges, Supreme Justices, attorneys; legislators, grand and petit jurors, prominent business men and politicians, and a host of others were on hand to witness the proceedings.

Now Acting-Governor George R. Carter was in attendance.

Among the ladies seated in the audience were Mrs. Sanford B. Dole, Mrs. W. F. Frear, Mrs. Alexander G. Hawes, Mrs. Lorrin Andrews and Miss Esther Warner.

The Chief Justice, robed in black judicial gown, with the judge-to-be, entered the court room from the adjoining chambers and, facing each other near the clerk's desk, their right hands raised, the justice administered the oath, after which the chief of the Supreme Court conducted the new judge to the bench. Judge Dole seated himself in the middle one of three seats, Justice Frear occupying his position on the judge's right. On Judge Dole's left there was a vacant seat draped in mourning—the chair formerly occupied by the late Judge Morris M. Estee.

A vase of yellow red and white roses decorated the desk in front of the central seat.

Judge Dole ordered the U. S. Marshal to open court and Mr. E. R. Hendry proceeded to do so.

The court then, addressing to gentlemen of the bar, stated that it was with a great deal of satisfaction that it entered upon its duties, stating that:

"There are no duties higher than the judicial." Mr. Smith stated that other members of the bar wished to express their welcome and named General Hartwell and Cecil Brown.

Hartwell said in part, addressing the court:

"Judge Dole: You have heard evil things enough said about you in the last ten or eleven years to make it appropriate now that something should be said in your praise. You should hear a few pleasant things now that you are laying aside the executive work which you have for so long been engaged in."

"I do not think that all the nice things should be said of a man after he is dead or that praise should come only from pastimes."

"This community is made up of various nationalities and has various ways of looking at the same thing. It is good that it should be so."

"In the crisis of 1893, when the occupant of the throne flung down constitutional obligations it was, in the opinion of many vigorous minds, a good time to declare the throne vacant and there was the question whether Kauai should succeed or a new government should be established. I do not know except by inference what your own opinions were on the subject. At that time there was not another person in the community who could have taken the responsibilities that you took and your actions commended themselves to all classes. All had confidence in your personal ability. It was more through that confidence in your integrity than in force of arms that the country passed safely through that crisis and I think that history will so record."

"The chief fault that has been found with you was that you were not partisan enough. You were not regarded as an ideal politician. But you were just the man who was needed in those critical years. You saw the fair thing done and there is no Hawaiian of intelligence who will not agree with that sentiment."

"You have the good fortune of never having sought the office. It was sedulously stated that I went to Washington to secure your appointment as Governor. When I left for Washington you had not even stated that you would accept the appointment if it were offered you."

"Your position as judge has also come unthought. It is a rare good fortune in the life of any man not to have sought the office."

"I believe this community, regardless of the rancors of the past years, is delighted with the appointment."

"You can carry along with you that assurance of confidence which has always been yours. I believe that the oath that you have just taken is to you no mere form but that it has its full meaning in your consciousness. I hope you will find your present duties a relief from your executive duties of the last ten years."

Hartwell's remarks were received with applause.

W. O. Smith having intimated that:

Royalties Enjoy a Hunt

[Associated Press Special Cable.]

LONDON, Nov. 18.—The King and Queen with the royal visitors from Italy spent the larger part of today hunting.

The American bark Gerard C. Tobey arrived this morning from Killisnoo, Alaska. She was docked at the makai end of railroad wharf No. 1 at about 9:15 o'clock. The Tobey brings a cargo of fish guano from Alaska. It is only quite occasionally that vessels arrive here from Alaska and the arrival of the Tobey therefore created some interest along the waterfront.

The Tobey took her cargo of fish guano on board at Killisnoo, leaving that place October 15. She experienced quite heavy weather during the first part of the voyage, losing several sails. The bark Gerard C. Tobey arrived in command of the first mate, Mr. Lancaster, Captain Scott acting as mate. This was due to the fact that Captain Scott was suspended for sixty days, owing to a quarrel with his mate on the last trip. Although the time of suspension was up twenty days ago Captain Scott declined to take over the command again until the vessel reached this port. Captain Scott's many friends here are glad to see him as master of his vessel again.

CAUGHT IN THE RAIN

There was more than one party caught up in Kalihi valley last Sunday afternoon when the heavy rains descended. A party composed of Ed Stiles, Tom Treadway, William Spencer, F. F. Fernandez and Eddie Montgomery went up in that direction for an outing during Sunday morning. They were in a carriage and their intention was to spend a quiet afternoon in the peaceful shadows of the valley. Suddenly the rain came down in perfect torrents, the stream became swollen and all crossing places were lost to view under several feet of water. Even the carriage started to float away and was only saved by quick action.

The boys went to George Wright's place, where they changed their wet clothes, donned holokus and spent the night.

Acting-Governor Carter has not yet received Treasurer Kepoikai's resignation and will make no appointments in departments until such withdrawal is received.

Carter at 10 o'clock this morning, under the Organic Act, as Secretary, became Acting Governor. As such he has not yet exercised his authority by any particular act, busying himself with clearing up work demanding attention in the Secretary's office.

The position of Superintendent of Public Works is vacant, although Carter states that he has received no official notification to that effect. Cooper's resignation took effect when Dole took the oath as Federal Judge this morning.

Dole addressed a note to Carter early this morning informing him that his resignation as Governor would be in force as soon as he became judge and notifying Carter that the duties of the Governorship would fall on Carter's shoulders.

Treasurer Kepoikai stated at 1:30 p. m. that he had not yet sent his resignation to Governor Carter. He would say nothing further on the subject.

Carter will call no meeting of the executive council at present, not being prepared to map out any policy until the resignations of all heads of departments are in his hands.

An interesting incident occurred this morning when a politician asked Carter why he did not have a private office where he could be consulted with less publicity.

Carter was seated in the Secretary's office, where he may continue to have his desk as Governor, an office easy of access and always open.

"I am a public servant," he replied, "and you can consult me in public. I need no private office."

This afternoon the Acting-Governor and Treasurer Kepoikai will consult on the matter of opening bids for the Territorial improvement bonds. They were to have been all in by 2 o'clock today. New York was notified not to open bids there until enough time had elapsed to allow for the difference of time between New York and Honolulu.

NO MONEY, NO STATUE

Some ten years ago an agitation was started here, the object of which was to secure money to put up a statue of King Kalakaua on Palace Square. People subscribed quite generally; some very liberally. History was being made at about that time and after collecting the money, the object for which it had been collected was forgotten, nor has it since been revived.

It now turns out that the money has never been returned to those who subscribed to the fund and, of course, no statue has been put up. Some of the subscribers have kept their receipts and are now clamoring to be paid back the money they put in. Just what the people in charge of the matter will do is a question. However, the subscribers will demand that they be paid what is coming to them.

so that by no chance could bidders here be notified from New York by cable of opened bids there. While 2 o'clock today is the limit for receiving bids they will not necessarily be opened this afternoon.
